

ADVOCACY

AT THE INTERSECTIONS

Working along side LGBTIQ+ people with disabilities

About this course

In this course you will learn how to be inclusive for the LGBTIQ+ community and look at how to advocate for LGBTIQ+ people with a disability.

Learning objectives

1. An understanding of the common terms and language used within the LGBTIQ+ communities including how we describe bodies, gender, and orientation.
2. Improved knowledge of the research and the law related to the lived experiences of LGBTIQ+ people with disabilities.
3. An increased awareness of how a human rights framework intersects with creating access for LGBTIQ+ people with disabilities and how this awareness can improve access and inclusion.
4. Reflect on current practice in your disability advocacy organisation and identify areas for improvement.
5. Become an advocate and an ally for LGBTIQ+ people with disabilities.

Acknowledgements

This project is a partnership between Disability Advocacy Resource Unit (DARU) and queerspace and is funded by Victorian Government's Disability Advocacy Futures Plan.

This course is available to anyone, free of charge, through the DARU website.

Who is this course for?

This course is primarily designed for disability advocates working in funded disability advocacy organisations in Victoria. However, anyone who does advocacy in their everyday lives will find this course valuable, including:

- People with disability
- Parents and other family members
- Disability support workers
- Allied Health Professionals
- Government representatives.

For more information on how to access this course visit: <http://www.daru.org.au/course/advocacy-at-the-intersections> or phone 0409 702 713 or email admin@daru.org.au